In the late 1988 somewhere in Baltimore, Maryland Jeff Grove, Troy, Dale and Mike form Immortal Reign. From the first moment appears the need for a second guitarist, so in no time Michael Donahoo becomes a member. Three months later having no official composition Mike, Troy and Dale decide to leave the band in February of 1989. Jeff and Michael continue searching for a new band. They both meet Mark Champlin, the original singer and guitarist of a group that do not have a name yet. The first song that they write as a new band is called Immortal Reign (To Reign...). Soon comes the first loss for the band when Chet leaves them in April of 1991. The same time they pick up Rodney McClothlin (Bass).

Finally, they decide to leave the name Immortal Reign just before the battle of the bands competition in July of 1991. Without losing their guts, they choose the name Omega Point. In October of 1991 Omega Point enter the Falling Sound Studios in Baltimore, Maryland with producer a young man called Drew Mazurek (at the same studio and the same producer three years later Manifest would write their one and only work "Find A New Place", another release of Arkeyn Steel Records) and they record the 5 tracks of the demo/EP. The demo tape "Infinite Rhyime" releases in 1500 copies in December of 1991.

Lastly, in the late 1993 they enter again the studio to record their first album with 13 tracks, titled the same as their demo "Infinite Rhyime". Omega Point are in the midst of recording a full length album when the bass player they have at this time, Rodney McClothlin, leaves. With all they have they try to audition people for almost a year but cannot fill his position properly. The sad is that when the work is completed, someone enters the band's studio and steals. The worst of all is that who committed the theft was a friend of the band that had access to the band's account. He takes all the money kept for the recordings of the full album and he disappears! Unfortunately, nothing is found, the thief leaves the state. So, with a 'no found' bassist and with a whole Omega Point album being missed, they split up in September of 1994.
